Highlighting the Flying Carpet Revue for 1962 is the popular Lion Dance presented annually by the Chinese students. The Revue, this year representing ten different countries, begins tonight and continues until Saturday. All shows begin at 8:30 and admission is $1.50.

Charities Drive Begins Monday

The time has come for all civic minded students to do their part in supporting the McGill Combined Charities Drive, which is beginning Monday and running until January 20.

Sue Carol Isaacson, the Campaign Chairman, stated that a staff of over 900 students has been selected to contact every student, day and evening alike, for his donation.

solely their responsibility. Students are requested to support the Campaign in a manner befitting responsible citizens.

Fifty percent of the proceeds of the Drive will be forwarded to World University Service for aiding students and professors in under-developed areas. The remainder is to be divided equally among four major charities — Red Feather, Combined Jewish Appeal, Federation of French Charities, and the Federation of Catholic Charities.

OBJECTIVE

The objective this year is to obtain two dollars per student. Cheques are acceptable. All students donating two dollars or more are eligible for a prize, to be awarded at the Grand Drawing which will take place at the end of the Campaign. Receipt stubs must be saved to claim the prizes. Faculty members who wish to support the Campaign are invited to do so.

McGill Combined Charities is a student run organization aimed directly at the student body, and is

Male Lead Selection Is Obstacle

The Red and White Revue may be forced to go off campus in its search for a male lead.

With less than a month to go before opening night, no McGill student has been found who is willing and able to play the part, described as a "basically nice braggart who somehow manages to squirm his way out of the husband-traps laid by the opposite sex".

OUTSIDER NEEDED

However, the Red and White has discovered a young French actor who is suitable for the part. He is an amateur, and a member of a group of the same acting level as the Revue.

Due to a by-law passed last year forbidding any non-McGill performer in a student production, the matter is now in the hands of the SEC. They must approve the actor, or he will not be able to appear, and the Revue will be minus a male lead.

REHEARSALS BEGIN

Despite the difficulties in casting a male lead, rehearsals for this year's production, "Just A Season?", began yesterday. Peter Scupham, responsible for the books, lyrics and dialogue of the show, will replace Neil Shee, who has dropped out of the Revue.

Canadian Aid Sought For Africa

OTTAWA (CUP) — A request for $900,000 and expert personnel has been asked of Canada for aid to education in Africa.

The request was put forward Monday by Dr. Malcolm Adiseshiah, assistant director general of UNESCO.

Dr. Adiseshiah, in Canada specifically to secure aid for the emergency African education aid program, said that Canadian personnel for preparing educational programs in African states were most important.

CANADIAN EXPERTS

He explained that UNESCO is attempting to send teams of experts into African states to determine realistically how educational systems should be planned. He pointed out that because of their bilingualism and lack of a colonial history in Africa, Canadian experts are vitally important to this emergency scheme. "Canadians are welcome in all countries," he asserted, "and they can play effective parts in the development of educational systems."

"Even if Canada does not contribute the money," said the UNESCO official, "UNESCO will spend money in placing and training Canadian personnel."

RECENT YEARS

He explained that in recent years UNESCO has concentrated its major endeavors on improving education and educational systems. Last year the African states adopted a 20-year plan to improve their primary, secondary and university education systems. To achieve their goals, they called on UNESCO to supply technical assistance and advice from countries such as Canada.

Dr. Adiseshiah also said there is a need for secondary school teachers, but he emphasized that his prime purpose in coming to Canada was to secure a financial contribution to the program and to find experts for "hard-core" planning teams.

The actual monetary request is for $300,000 annually for the three years. Approximately $2,000,000 has been contributed by other U.N. members. A total of $4,000,000 is being sought by UNESCO for this project.

Situation In Africa Aired

WINNIPEG (CUP) — A leading Ghanaian diplomat will discuss the growing problem of nationalism in Africa today at the Conference on Commonwealth Affairs later this month.

The University of Manitoba conference will be attended by approximately 45 students from universities across the country.

L. W. Tsitsiwi, educational attaché to the Ghanaian embassy in Washington, will make the keynote address.

CREIGHTON SPEAKS

Donald Creighton, professor of history at the University of Toronto, will also speak to the conference and is expected to lead one of the seminar groups.

Two other speakers, one from the diplomatic field, the other from the academic, will also address the conference. The meeting is January 23 to 26.

These charitable souls are putting a last effort into the preparations for the Combined Charities Campaign which opens on campus Monday. Campaign officials hope for an average donation of two dollars per student. The drive will continue throughout the week.

Speak Up

We were happy to see the local committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students respond to the harsh criticism of an earlier letter to the Editor. It was gratifying to know that they are still alive and well, but we wish that we could have assurances of their continued existence more often.

In his reply (printed in the adjoining columns), Mr. Litvack, the McGill NFCUS chairman, points out that the committee does not "spend their days practicing rousing cheers" and that they "seldom hold pep rallies". This has been a grave mistake, their greatest problem, as we see it, is the absence of a publicity chairman. NFCUS does a lot of excellent work for Canadian students, the large sum of money spent in its upkeep is not wasted as some critics have suggested. But what other conclusion can these critics draw if all constructive NFCUS activities are kept a deep dark secret.

NFCUS at McGill has been the subject of many adverse comments. It deserves all that has been said about it, not because the criticisms themselves are true — a great majority of them are erroneous and unjustified — but because the local committee has never made any serious attempt to enlighten a student body which knows little or nothing about NFCUS.

It is all very well for NFCUS to work quietly behind the scenes, but why doesn't it inform the student public when the federation extracts a benefit from government or any other source. How can NFCUS expect to be respected if it never tells anybody what it is doing merely responding to criticism is hardly enough. How can we possibly have a strong national student organization if, to most students, NFCUS means little more than five letters selected at random.

At the beginning of this year we had a very low opinion of NFCUS and said so in these columns. Immediately thereafter we were treated to a course on the virtues of NFCUS. Since that time we have had lengthy discussions with members of the national executive. We are amazed at how so worthwhile an organization manages to convey so bad a public image.

Mr. Litvack points out that among other things, NFCUS was instrumental in getting tuition fees accepted as income tax deductions. He goes on to compare the large savings which resulted from this legislation to the minimal NFCUS fee. He is quite right in connecting NFCUS and tax savings, but he is one of the few students in the country who is aware that this connection exists.

You've got a good organization going, NFCUS, but we can only appreciate you if you come out of hiding.

A Puzzle

It is becoming increasingly apparent that the Red and White Revue may have to go outside the McGill student body to find a suitable lead for this year's show primarily due to poor response from qualified McGill students. There are certain kinds of apathy which we can understand, but the prospect of the lead role in the revue lying around and creating no interest is, to say the least, puzzling.

The Chairman Writes

NFCUS Is Most Effective Working Behind The Scene

Dear Madam:

We were most pleased to note in the November 28 issue of the McGill Daily that certain elements on the campus are prepared to take an interest in the activities of the National Federation of Canadian University Students. While the interest expressed appears to be a rather negative one, I am personally satisfied that even this is more constructive than studied indifference.

One of the problems which N.F.C.U.S. continually faces on the local level is the almost complete lack of understanding which exists concerning its purposes and methods. Perhaps in this short and (hopefully) succinct statement we may encourage some of our fellow students to develop a greater appreciation of the work of this organization.

First, it must be realized that N.F.C.U.S. is not an "activity". The members of the committee do not wear elaborately designed uniforms nor do they spend their days practising rousing cheers and similar tribal rites. Strange as it may seem we have no budgetary requisition for campus publicity (although admittedly the S.E.C. has suggested this) and we seldom hold pep rallies.

Discrete Work

For N.F.C.U.S.'s best work is generally done very discretely and with a minimum of fanfare. Probably its most valuable function is as, if I may be permitted the nasty phrase, "a pressure or interest group". A continuing program exists both at the provincial and federal levels to bring the interests and problems of the student population to the attention of the proper authorities.

Regular briefs are submitted to both governments in which an attempt is made to encourage the powers that be to affect appropriate measures to improve the students' lot. Naturally we are not always successful, but the successes to date appear to more than balance out the failures. A measure which we have succeeded in promoting is the recent amendment to the income tax act which allows a student to deduct his tuition fees from his taxable income.

Our efforts in this area are continuing with the hope that in the not too distant future this exemption may be extended to expenditures for books and instruments. It has been estimated that these two measures alone can bring the student who files an income tax return annual savings of from $40.00 to $120.00 at a minimum. Perhaps this may be compared to the fifty cents per capita assessment.

There are other areas where discrete behind the scenes work by N.F.C.U.S. can and has brought real and tangible advantage to the Canadian university student. To mention only a few, we may cite reduced rates on student travel, student payments of unemployment insurance premiums, availability of positions for summer employment, bursaries and scholarships, et cetera. The need is obviously great. Past achievements have been gratifying. Future possibilities are virtually unlimited.

by

Chairman,
McGill NFCUS Committee

Secondary Objectives

But N.F.C.U.S. also has secondary objectives. We mention these only briefly, because, at least personally, we are of the persuasion that they are strictly secondary. These would include the National Literary Contest, the National Seminars, to mention just a few. Don't get us wrong. We do not feel that these are unimportant, but rather that similar purposes could conceivably be achieved at other levels.

Each of these activities does provide a valuable service to the student. The first two have done admirable work in discovering and promoting new talent. The National Seminars have provided an invaluable workshop and training ground for student leaders.

Any McGill student who has travelled or studied abroad can attest to the contribution of the Travel Program in securing interesting itineraries and substantial discounts on travel, accommodation, food and entertainment. Parenthetically, I might add, that in my own case it might even take part credit for the wife which I brought back from Europe with me!

Foreign Role

At the level of international student activity, through C.O.S.E.C. and other co-ordinating bodies, N.F.C.U.S. and Canadian students have played a strong role in improving international understanding and working for improved conditions for students in foreign lands. During the next six months, a commission of inquiry at the student level will inspect educational facilities in Africa. At least, one representative of N.F.C.U.S. will be on this commission. Last year, a similar study was made into Indian educational problems.

Madam, your correspondents appear to be disturbed that N.F.C.U.S. is not an organization "in which a large number of students actively participate". I share their chagrin. In fact, madam, I was perhaps even more disturbed when a meeting of the Students' Society was called last spring to discuss N.F.C.U.S.'s National Bursary program, a project which certainly must interest most students, and yet not enough students attended to constitute the required quorum. Here, where a massive display of student solidarity was of vital importance, the vast majority of McGill's students decided to "Let George do it".

Well, George is trying to do it. He and the other students actively engaged in N.F.C.U.S. work would more than welcome the support and assistance of The Inquirers.

In closing, I would like to thank you most sincerely for this opportunity to answer the questions put to us. Naturally, it has been impossible to go into detail but I am enclosing herewith 100 copies of the booklet, "Progress in Student Unity", which is at your disposal and at the disposal of any other interested student.

Missing Alumni Sought To Clear Unpaid Loans

A gigantic dragnet will soon get underway in order to apprehend some 15,000 university graduates guilty of not paying their debt to society.

These alumni are "missing persons" — graduates who have lost touch with their almae matres, and their debt is some seven million dollars in unrepaid student loans.

The campaign to contact these delinquent graduates will span the entire United States and is being organized by Tracers Co. of America, specialists in locating missing persons.

Ed Goldfader, General Manager of Tracers Co., estimates that about 85% of the alumni sought will be located. In addition to the repayment of Student Loans, it is expected that a second and possibly greater source of income will be in the form of voluntary contributions and scholarship funds, which will pour into the various schools from relocated alumni.

Goldfader cites, as an example, the story of one such graduate, whom Tracers searched for in 1959. It was learned that he had gone to England and become a rich man. When located and informed of an impending class reunion, he presented a gift of $25,000.

Recreation Centre Is Built In Pakistan For College Students

The Khyber Union, the SEC of the Islamia College of Peshawar, Pakistan is building a Students' Recreation Centre.

The Khyber Union is the largest students' society in Pakistan. It comprises 1,800 members, of whom the President and Cabinet are elected directly by the students. Last year this Cabinet allocated 45,000 rupees towards the building of the Recreation Centre, to which was added 15,000 rupees from the Principal of Islamia College, and 20,000 rupees from the University of Peshawar. The total amounts to $31,600.

The new Recreation Centre to be completed soon, is apparently destined to serve students from the two universities in Pakistan.

McMaster To Try Mid-Term Recess Again This Year

HAMILTON (CUP) — Students at McMaster University will receive a mid-term break again this year, enabling them to catch up on late essays and to prepare for final examinations.

The recess, March 4-10, was reinstated last year and, according to Dr. H.S. Armstrong, dean of Arts and Science, "The general experience proved to be satisfactory."

NOT PERMANENT

He stressed that the recess is not to be considered a permanent part of the academic year, and that its continuance this year should not be regarded as establishing a precedent.

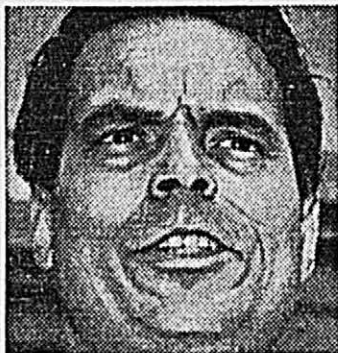

During the week, no undergraduate classes will be held, but members of the faculty will be available for consultation. A result of study week is the extension of lectures to April 7.

The professors' team, being organized by professor Co-vo, is expected to turn out a top performance to regain some of the popularity which they lost after the mid-term examinations.

The annual event is admission free and will attempt to bring to the public eye all phases of the indoor sports offered at the University. Demonstrations of gymnastics, wrestling and judo will
